DWIC 2027 CELEBRATING 10 YEARS

In 2027, the Dubai World Insurance Congress (DWIC) will celebrate its 10th anniversary—a significant milestone in the event’s remarkable journey. Since launching in 2017 with just 500 attendees, DWIC has grown into one of the industry’s leading global gatherings. In 2027, we anticipate welcoming more than 2,000 delegates, representing four-fold growth over the past decade. Today, the DWIC community spans more than 85 countries, bringing together leaders, innovators and decision-makers from across the global insurance and reinsurance markets.

Our journey has been shaped by a sustained growth and an enduring drive to evolve. Together, we navigated unprecedented challenges, including delivering the first major international insurance event following the COVID-19 lockdowns. More recently, we remained true to our commitment to the market by ensuring DWIC 2026 took place in 2026, adapting swiftly to regional conflict with a rescheduled event in December.

Over the past ten years, DWIC has become more than an annual conference. It is a global community built on collaboration, trust and shared ambition. As we celebrate this milestone, we also look ahead to the next decade of connecting markets, fostering innovation and shaping the future of insurance together.

After a disrupted 2026, the 10th DWIC is not simply another edition. It is a moment to bring the market back together and look at what has remained constant while everything else has shifted.

DWIC 2027: Consistency in a changing market

For a decade, DWIC has brought the global insurance and reinsurance community together in Dubai.

The market has changed considerably over those ten years. New risks have emerged, capital has evolved, technology has transformed how the industry operates and the relationships that underpin the market have continued to matter.

As DWIC enters its tenth edition, that feels particularly relevant.

Because in a changing market, consistency matters.

Consistency in the relationships we build.

Consistency in the conversations we have.

Consistency in showing up for the market, even when circumstances change.

DWIC 2027 is an opportunity to reconnect, reflect on how the market has evolved and look ahead to what comes next.

Ten years of bringing the market together. One constant: the value of being in the room.

TEN YEARS OF CHANGE. ONE CONSTANT.

REINSURANCE 2036: THE NEXT DECADE STARTS NOW

Under the theme “Reinsurance 2036: The Next Decade Starts Now” DWIC will bring together global industry leaders to explore how the reinsurance market can build resilience in an era of geoeconomic uncertainty, climate volatility, technological disruption and evolving capital markets. Through keynote presentations, executive panels and leadership discussions, delegates will examine the forces shaping the global risk landscape—from geoeconomic fragmentation and emerging systemic risks to the future of reinsurance capital, underwriting in an increasingly volatile world, and the changing expectations of investors, clients and regulators.

The three-day programme explores the forces shaping the next decade, from artificial intelligence and talent to climate risk, cyber threats and emerging systemic risks.

FOCUS FOR CONTENT

The Next Decade Starts Now

Opening address exploring why reinsurance is entering a defining period shaped by geoeconomic fragmentation, climate volatility, technological transformation and evolving capital markets. This session will set the direction for the day by examining the strategic choices insurers and reinsurers must make today to remain competitive over the next decade.

The World in 2036: What Will the Risk Landscape Look Like?

A geoeconomic outlook examining the forces expected to reshape global risk over the next decade, including conflict, trade realignment, demographics, energy security, cyber threats and economic volatility. The discussion will consider how these trends are likely to influence underwriting priorities, capital allocation and long-term business strategy.

The Future of Global Reinsurance Capital

How will capital evolve over the next decade? This panel will examine how changing investor expectations, market volatility and new forms of capacity could reshape the global reinsurance landscape and influence where capital is deployed.

Underwriting Through Permanent Uncertainty

The industry is moving from managing cycles to managing continuous disruption. Panellists will discuss how underwriting strategies are adapting to increasingly interconnected risks while maintaining discipline and sustainable performance.

AI, Data, Decision Intelligence & Talent

How artificial intelligence, data and decision intelligence will reshape underwriting, catastrophe modelling, claims and portfolio management by 2036 and the talent required to make it work. The conversation will explore where AI can enhance decision making, where human judgement and expertise remain essential, and how the industry will need to attract, develop and retain the talent capable of working alongside increasingly intelligent technologies. It will also examine how firms can build confidence, accountability and the right balance between technology and human expertise as automation becomes embedded across the insurance and reinsurance value chain.

Climate Beyond Catastrophe

Climate risk is expanding beyond traditional catastrophe models, creating new challenges for insurers, reinsurers and their clients. This session will explore how the market can respond to evolving physical and transition risks while supporting long-term resilience.

Geopolitics, Conflict & the New Risk Economy

As geoeconomic tensions reshape the global economy, how should reinsurers respond? Panellists will assess how conflict, political fragmentation and economic uncertainty are changing risk accumulation, underwriting appetite and global reinsurance demand.

Innovation Showcase: Tomorrow's Risks

Rapid-fire presentations exploring emerging opportunities and risk classes expected to become increasingly important over the next decade. Speakers will examine how the industry can prepare for fast-moving technologies and business models before they become mainstream.

What Will Make a Winning Reinsurer in 2036?

Senior industry leaders discuss the capabilities, strategies and operating models that will define market leaders over the coming decade. The session will conclude with audience questions on the biggest priorities facing the global reinsurance market.

From Uncertainty to Opportunity

Key takeaways and strategic priorities for the decade ahead. Delegates will leave with a clearer understanding of the trends likely to shape the market, and the actions organisations can take to build resilience.

THE JOURNEY FROM DOHA TO DUBAI

The Dubai World Insurance Congress first launched in 2017 at the Jumeirah Beach Hotel, marking the beginning of a new chapter for the global reinsurance market. Building on the success of delivering Multaqa Qatar for the previous decade, Global Reinsurance introduced a new vision: to create an international event centred around Dubai and the Dubai International Financial Centre (DIFC), bringing together the world's insurance and reinsurance community in one of the fastest-growing financial centres in the world.

From the outset, the ambition was bigger than creating another industry event. It was about establishing a meeting place that reflected Dubai's growing importance to the global financial and insurance community, with the DIFC at its heart.

That vision has become a reality. Under the DIFC's leadership, Dubai has evolved into one of the world's most important financial hubs and a natural home for international insurance and reinsurance business. The Centre has played a defining role in creating an environment where global firms can establish themselves, build relationships and access opportunities across some of the world's fastest-growing markets.

As Dubai's influence has grown, so too has the international significance of DWIC. What began as a new chapter for the reinsurance community has developed into a global gathering point for the industry, reflecting the same ambition, connectivity and international outlook that have come to define the DIFC itself.

Today, DWIC sits at the intersection of these markets. Dubai provides a strategic gateway connecting the Middle East, Africa, Asia and beyond, while the DIFC provides the financial ecosystem and international credibility that make it possible for the world's insurance and reinsurance leaders to come together, do business and shape the future of the market.

The journey from Doha to Dubai is therefore more than the story of an event moving location. It is the story of an industry following the momentum of Dubai and the DIFC, and of a shared ambition to establish the region as a truly global centre for insurance and reinsurance.
